

ABSTRACT

The present invention is in the field of memory architecture and management. More particularly, the present invention provides a method, apparatus, system, and machine-readable medium to hide refresh cycles of a memory array such as dynamic random access memory.